CLEVELAND INDIANS

- Value Based Ticket Pricing: The Indians have developed an innovative value based ticket strategy to debut in 2009. Based on our market research, our ticket buyer's feedback and their buying habits, the Cleveland Indians organization has responded with a ticket structure that is based on the concept that not all 81 home games are created equal. The inherent reality of the six-month MLB season dictates that a weekday game in April/May has a different perceived value than a summer weekend game. As a result, we have priced the 2009 season accordingly. Four pricing categories have been established for the 2009 season-- Spring Super Savers (13 Games- Best Seats 50% OFF); Spring Value (8 Games), Summer Value (29 Games) and Prime (31 Games).
- Buy One Get One Free Season Tickets- For $2,106 a fan can receive TWO SEATS in a great Upper Deck View Box location for all 81 home games, which is a savings of 57% off single game pricing.
- ampm All You Can Eat Seats- Fans will have an all-you-can-eat option in a select Upper Deck location in 2009 featuring hot dogs, peanuts, popcorn, nachos and soft drinks.
- Value Tuesday- Select Tuesday's on the Indians promotional schedule will feature ticket and food value discounts, including six $1 hot dog dates.

SAN FRANCISCO GIANTS

- Almost half of the seating capacity at AT&T Park is priced at $20-25 per ticket. And Monday-Thursday, fans can purchase a View Reserved outfield ticket for $10.
- Prices for 50 percent of single game ticket inventory has been reduced by $1 to $5 per ticket for the 2009 season.
- The Giants offer a number of ticket packages. For example, at Costco Stores, Giants fans can purchase a $24 gift card good for two view reserved tickets to a 2009 Giants home game. Additionally, the Giants have the Cy-Young 4-Pack in honor of 2008 Cy Young Award winner Tim Lincecum – for $55 fans receive a 4-pack of tickets that includes Opening Night and the Lincecum Bobblehead giveaway game.
- Dynamic Pricing: The Giants are the first MLB team to institute a dynamic pricing structure which allows the team to continually readjust ticket prices up to the morning of a game based on market demand. By using a computer model created by Texas based qcue, the Giants can adjust ticket prices – up or down – based on the market demand for the game. Dynamic pricing gives the team the flexibility to keep pace with the secondary ticket market and to adjust prices based on unforeseen factors that could increase or decrease demand for a specific game. This includes team performance, the starting pitcher, promotional giveaways or an opponents' team performance.
- Knothole Gang: The Giants right field wall contains open archways, where fans can walk up and watch the game free of charge. The Giants also pipe in the team's radio broadcast so fans can follow the game more closely.
- The Giants kids' meal is one of the best deals in the ballpark -- which includes a hot dog, drink, carrots, cookies and a toy for $4.50.
- The Giants allow food to be brought into the stadium, enabling families to save money on food and beverages while at a game.

SEATTLE MARINERS

- No general price increase for 2009 single and season tickets.
- Prices for season ticket holders will actually go down in 2009 because they are no longer subject to "premium" pricing.
